Shoots Wife, Then Turns Gun on Himself

The wife of Philip Hart was found lying dead in her garden near Burnis on Tuesday evening, with a bullet hole in her body, while her husband was found lying a short distance away suffering from a self-inflicted wound across the forehead. The police were immediately notified, and together with Coroner P. M. Pinkney, were soon on the scene. Hart was placed under arrest by Const. Stuchbery of the Bellevue detachment of the R. N. W. M.P., and taken to Bellevue, where his wounds were dressed at the hospital and he was afterwards placed in the barracks cell. The body of the woman was moved to the house, where an autopsy was conducted by Dr. Mackenzie, of Bellevue.

An inquest was held on Wednesday before Coroner Pinkney, and the prisoner was remanded to come up for preliminary trial on Tuesday next.

The first witness called was Dr. Mackenzie, who viewed the body about 10 o'clock. On examination he found a small wound about six inches from the right side of the spine, between the ninth and tenth ribs, quarter of an inch long. Further examination exposed a second wound in front of the left shoulder. The line of direction between the two wounds passed across the middle of the breast bone, cutting off a valve of the heart, causing blood to flow freely. From the wounds it would appear that the bullet went into the stomach and out at the shoulder. Death was undoubtedly instantaneous. There was no other evidence of violence, and he could not tell how far the woman would have been from the gun.

The second witness called was Mrs. Minnie Sargent, who had been staying at the Hart ranch for some months. She was an eye-witness to the tragedy. She stated that Hart had been to Bellevue that day, and returned home about 3 o'clock. He entered the house and went to his desk to get a letter that he had forgotten to mail. Finding that it had disappeared, he asked his wife what had become of it, when she indignantly told him that she had the letter and would not give it up. A great deal of quabbling ensued, in which all were engaged.

Mrs. Hart sent her daughter for the police, while he both went to a neighbor's for assistance. Going through a potato patch, about 200 yards from the house, he stopped to talk to the hired man. While standing, Mr. Hart came out of the house with a 303 rifle in his hand, and running towards them, demanded Mrs. Hart to go back to the house with him and deliver up the letter. He pointed the gun at Mrs. Hart, it being by his hip. As she told him that she was not afraid of him, in a sarcastic manner, he remarked "You are not!" and the gun went off. Mrs. Hart fell. I covered my face with my hands and shouted "Oh, don't! Oh, don't!"

Ambrose Oliver (a Breed) who had been employed at the ranch for some time, said that Hart was apparently sober when he returned from Bellevue. The first he knew of the row was when he saw the little girl going out on saddle-horse. In a little while Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Sargent came down in the potato patch, where he was digging. He then saw Hart

Coming out of the house. He went up to within three yards of Mrs. Hart and made a rush to help her, when Hart said "Stop, or you'll be sorry for it."

He then saw Hart put the gun to his shoulder, and saw Mrs. Hart fall to the ground. He afterwards saw Hart go back towards the house, into the bushes, and then heard another shot. "He often heard Hart say that he would shoot her first, and then shoot himself."

Const. R. C. Stuchbery stated that he received a telephone message from Burnis, and on instructions from Sergt. Mayor proceeded to the Hart ranch and arrested Hart for the murder of his wife. He brought Hart to Bellevue. Hart never said a word to him about the affair.

After the evidence had been taken, Coroner Pinkney instructed the jury, who retired and shortly afterwards returned with a verdict to the effect that Alice Hart came to her death on the Hart ranch on the evening of Tuesday, October 12 by gun-shot wounds from a rifle in the hands of her husband, Philip Hart.

The following gentlemen composed the Jury: John Kerr, William Lloyd Evans, Arthur Goodwin, Anthony Wardman, Martin Joseph Sheehan and James Carlson.

Hart was taken down to Macleod and will be brought back to Bellevue on Tuesday next, where the preliminary trial will take place at 10 o'clock. W. M. Campbell, K.C., of Macleod, will appear for the Crown, and L. H. Putnam, of Blairmore, will defend the accused.

The funeral of Mrs. Hart took place at Blairmore on Thursday afternoon, Rev. F. T. Cook of Bellevue, officiating. Among those who attended were Mrs. Sargent, Vera Hart, L. H. Putnam, Martin Joseph Sheehan, and Joseph Harrington.

The Man Who Borrows a Paper

It is said that a man who won't buy a paper because he can borrow one has just missed the chance of making his dinner from the smoke of his neighbor's chimney. The same fellow-sit in the back row at church, to contribute, and is always borrowing a ride to save horseflesh. He is first to come to the man who never lends his watch for fear of breaking the spring.
He was no doubt a near relative to the man who went into the back yard and ring a man's letter, soaked his ink in cold water, let it freeze, then broke it off in order to test the barrier out of a letter-cut.

Satisfactory Substitute

Two Septuagenarians were staying at the commercial hotel in a Welsh town, when they discovered that the washstand in their room was innocent of soap. They rang the bell and the attendant arrived just as they wanted.

"See up there, lad, a wee bit sap-quid!" said one. The attendant gazed at the two men of strange tongue and muttered to himself.

"They're not French, nor Dutch, nor Russian. What can they want?"

One of the Scots grew impatient.
"Mon," he thundered, "can ye no talk plain Scotch?"

The attendant promptly withdrew and returned with a bottle of Highland dew and two glasses.

CANADIAN PICTORIAL

Canada's Most Artistic and Popular Magazine

This elegant magazine delights the eye while it instructs the mind concerning the picturesque details of an interesting and highly entertaining world.

Its war pictures are alone worth the money.

Each issue is literally crowded with the highest quality of photographs, many of them worth framing.

It is the most popular "pick-me-up" on the waiting room tables of the leading doctors throughout the Dominion, and in the big public libraries it is literally "used up" by the many who are attracted by its entertaining and beautiful pages.

It's a "love at sight" publication and it has departmental features of great interest to the young woman and the home-maker.

Of it—just to quote one man's praise from among thousands—the late Sir Hon. Lord Strathcona, wrote:

Canada's Alien

According to a special report on Canada's foreign-born population just issued from Ottawa, there are no fewer than 165,775 persons of enemy birth resident in the Dominion. There are 121,300 Austro-Hungarians settled in the various provinces of Canada. The Germans, born inhabitants number 39,777, while the Turkish and Syrian settlers total 4,768.

There are not quite so many subjects of Great Britain's allies living in Canada as there are persons of alien enemy extraction. We have 17,000 residents of French birth, 34,729 Italians and 89,984 Russians.

Whether the Bulgarians are to be classified alien enemies or allies the next days will likely reveal. There are 1000 Bulgarians resident in the Dominion.

About half the Austro-Hungarian and Germans have become naturalized Canadians. The figures are 60,949 and 28, 283 respectively. We have 1889 naturalized subjects of Turkish birth.

While these figures show that we have a considerable population of alien origin, the ratio they bear to the total citizenship of the Dominion is the merest fraction of that which obtains in the United States.

Canada is still, in all intents and purposes, the heritage of the two nationalities that first colonized it. One regard of the war will probably be a revision of the immigration system which will prevent a promiscuous rush of aliens from all parts of Europe, such as Canada has been periodically threatened with in the past, and such as is fast relegating the Anglo-Saxon element in the United States to a position of secondary importance.—E.S.

May Raise Sunken Lusitania

Engineers in England are seriously discussing the possibility that the Lusitania may be raised from the ocean bed, says the Washington Times. She lies at a depth of 330 to 400 feet, in a bottom that is supposed to be hard enough to have prevented her becoming jammed in mud and grown into the sea floor. This is in many cases the greatest difficulty about raising a ship.

The Lusitania and her cargo are estimated to weigh about 40,000 tons, which is a greater weight than has ever been dragged up from the sea's bottom.

Moreover, the depth at which she lies is perhaps 100 feet greater than any at which divers have ever successfully operated. But it is suggested that greater power and bigger appliances might overcome the greater weight; while there have been recent improvements in diving apparatus which might make the work possible, despite the great depth.

Especially it is claimed that a spherical diving machine has been perfected, in which one could go to much greater depths and still work, using artificial light to guide them.

Most planible of the plans proposed is that which looks to attaching cables to the ship and lifting her a few feet and then towing her ashore to shallow water where she would again rest on the bottom; then lifting her again and taking another jacking step upward; and so on until she should be brought to such a depth of water that ordinary diving apparatus could serve the salvagers.

The problem is considered to be, at least, one of whether the cost would be greater than the value of the salvage.

couver and Cranbrook. Chin reports that some of the people in Advertising

When I was selling books and eyes, I never failed to advertise. My stock was small, my joint obscure, but my announcements proved a big asset and people came from distant shores, and passed by all other stores, they gladly came to patronize the man who boomed his books and eyes. My ads were small, but full of zip; they gripped you, and they held their grip; there was no weary waffle of words, no language thrown at passing bids. I wrote them daily in my store; they were my most important chore.
Each day I gave folks something new, to keep my little joint in view, and shrews and dials, were always looking for my ads. All kinds of people, counts and cooks, came there to buy my eyes and books, to see the man whose daily epigram lent savor to the evening meal. And now you see my fine record, my golden loaves in Easy Street. This epigram to me, with baldy snail, a man who quickly made his pile; a few short years have seen him rise from that small joint of books and eyes, to clipping coupons at his ease; a heap of bonds and his kisses.—Walt Mason.

Retail Merchants May Soon Sell For Cash Only

There is some talk among the retail merchants of this province about adopting the cash system in selling. Meetings have been held in some of the towns with a view to throwing out the adversities and disadvantages of the scheme, before coming to any decision. Judging from reports the majority of the retail merchants favor going away with back accounts and selling their wares for cash only.

The cash system is undoubtedly the better plan, and the buyer ultimately derives the benefit of the system. Every merchant can sell goods cheaper when he sells them for cash, pays cash for his goods and never loses a dollar on bad accounts than the merchant who carries debtors the length of the year.

The mail order houses have cut into business in Western Canada to a great extent, and thousands of dollars in cash are sent to New York and Chicago annually. Taking this into consideration, the local merchant might reasonably sell for cash also, and then be able to cut his margin of profit to a lower percentage. If the cash system is adopted, it is said, that the merchants will not do as hard a task to the effect that no sale will be made without the cash being paid.

Whether the merchants of this district will consider this plan or not is not known, but if other towns take this step, it is quite possible that the movement will spread.

Advertising Spells Success

Merit is the fundamental requisite for success, but without adequate advertising the zenith of success cannot be achieved. Publicity is the last relay on the road to success. The stock in trade may be of the finest quality; yet if the public be not advised, it remains on the shelves. The good business man pur-price and advertises the fact. His advertisement brings the customer; the quality and his prices keep them.

chases good merchandise, sells at a fair price and advertises the fact. His ad-
quality and his prices keep them.
